Good and Bad Archives - The Case of Albert Guerin's 1875 Black Hills Photographs

RAPID CITY, SD - The Journey Museum & Learning Center announces the next event in its Turtle Soup Lecture Series, set for Friday, October 13th, titled "Good and Bad Archives - The Case of Albert Guerin's 1875 Black Hills Photographs". Former BHSU professor Robb Campbell combines the past with the present in a discussion of how the "digital age" influenced historical archive processes.

"Good and Bad Archives - The Case of Albert Guerin's 1875 Black Hills Photographs" begins at noon on October 13 in the Journey Museum & Learning Center's upstairs library. In 1875, Albert Guerin released "Professor Jenny's Expedition to the Black Hills", a series of photographs taken one year after Custer's famous expedition. Campbell will discuss how these photos relate to the founding of the computer application Mosaic.

Released in 1993, Mosaic became the first image browser for the World Wide Web. Mosaic is widely attributed with introducing the Internet to a general audience, ushering in a "digital age" of society. Campbell links the creation of Mosaic to the Jenney Expedition photographs in a program of archival history.

Robb Campbell has always been a historian, with degrees from Shattuck, Harvard, Augustana, and Kansas. A native of Spearfish, he has worked and taught in many places, most recently a decade at Black Hills State University. He is trained in environmental history and specializes in landscape, combining remote sensing with traditional historical documents. He lives in Spearfish with his wife and two children.

Feed your mind and your belly with the Turtle Soup Lecture Series. Every Turtle Soup features a presentation on historic figures who influenced Black Hills history and includes soup from Angel's Catering.

Admission for Turtle Soups are included in the regular cost of admission to the Journey Museum & Learning Center.
